

Introduction

Sandi Smith is an internationally published, award-winning author of seven books and over 200 articles, many of which were written for companies like Microsoft, Intuit, and the American Institute of CPAs.

She has worked in two award-winning Fortune 500 Information Technology departments and was a team member of one of the top ten most influential technology projects of the 1980s.

She is a CPA, a CMA (Certified Management Accountant), a CDP (Certified Data Processor), and a CIW-Associate (Certified Internet Webmaster). She also holds a MS in Applied Cognition and Neuroscience from University of Texas at Dallas.

Sandi is one of roughly twenty females in the world who has co-piloted a small airplane around the world.

She has traveled to 100 countries and has been recognized for her volunteer services on five continents, including helping restore sight to blind people in Asia, teaching Russians Western bookkeeping skills, understanding the motivations of gang leaders in the U.S., and teaching computer skills to Africans.

Sandi loves to help people live bigger than they ever imagined they could.

Please welcome Sandi Smith.
